Roosevelt Dinner Slip—
Leaders "Didn't Hear."

"Right here I want to say I believe in Trusts. They are a good thing. The standard Oil Company pat in its pipe lines to all the small towns where oil is produced, and if it was not for the Standard Oil Company this prosperity that we have wouldn't be there to-day."

When the Republican leaders present at last night's dinner turned in amazement which they have discharged them they were striking coal miners. And the they were striking coal miners. The send of tained singers. The grandest Republican gathering which has ever been had no one has heard anything since of "Scott's striking coal miners."

Republicans are cursing and Democrats are laughing.

Stott's performance is being likened to that of Dr. Burchard. Each betrayed the inward feeling of his party upon one of the subjects about which the popular mind is sensitive.

Senator Scott denied to an Evening World reporter his morning that the remarks attributed to him at the Roosevelt dinner were made in his speech.

Said the Senator:

"I was very much nettled when an Evening World reporter sought life version of Senator Scott's "Break."

"The story is a lie from beginning to end. Not a word of truth in it."

"Then no effort was made afterward to suppress the story?" the reporter asked.

"Yes, there was," came the unexpected reply, "Why. I thought you said the story was a lie, not a word of truth in it. How did you know there was a story to suppress?" was asked.

"I have alking in a jocular vein, and will be subject."

William H. Ten Eyck, who was also present, said he was too far away to hear what was going on down where Senator Scott sat. But he was sure the story was false, and that Senator Scott was in his right mind and in excellent health at the dinner. West Virginia.

"I was talking in a jocular vein, and I said the State of West Virginia is run largely by gas and that Senator Elkins and I produced a great deal of it.
"It was a playful remark.
"Evidently this was overheard by a reporter and exagerated. I did not say anything of the kind reported."
"Did you say the presperity of the country was due largely to the Standard Oil Trust?" the reporter asked.

Scott Gets Evasive.
"Certainly not," realled Senator Scott.

"I can be charged with a great many things, but not with being a political ided."
"Did you say that you believed in trusts!"
"I did not."

Hanna Wanted Secrecy.

But Hanna knew that if he succeeded it must be under cover, for if it were admitted that he, the manager of the McKinley campaign, could by a word make the Coal Trust accede to the demands of the men, that would be the beat of evidence of the truth of the Democratic charge that "the Republican party supports the trusts and the trusts support the Republican party." So Hanna was silent as the Sphinx. But Scott fidgeted. After their marriage the couple moved to Brooklyn Heights, where they kept an expensive establishment and entertained with lavish prodigality.

They had lived together three years and land gone well when Mrs. Rockwell, aunt of the bride, died and left her niece $100,000 in cash and valuable property besides.

As a result of an order obtained by this windfall the happiness of the married pair began to dwindle to illiputian proportions and it was not long before open trouble showed its head above the alimony of $639, Charles W. ## POLITICS. New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings!

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this. PAINFUL PERIODS.
